Limelight, LLC Brings New Friends and Stories Together with Homebound Season 2

Ann Arbor, MI: Limelight, LLC, a Michigan-based theatre consulting company founded by Jessica “Decky” Alexander, will be launching a second season of its podcast, Homebound: A Dialogue for the Ages on multiple streaming platforms August 18. The podcast, a collaboration between Limelight and Generations United through their project Intergenerational Solutions for Healthy Aging in Michigan supported by the Michigan Health Endowment Fund features conversation and stories shared between our culture’s elders and youth. Homebound: A Dialogue for the Ages will be available for streaming on a variety of platforms with new episodes released every other Wednesday.

“The Homebound podcast brings the importance and value of intergenerational dialogue to a new medium and new audiences,” said Donna Butts, executive director of Generations United. “The second season highlights the richness of personal connections at all ages, and we are honored to be part of this unique intergenerational experience.”

After a first season spent exploring the COVID-19 worlds of elders within their community, the Homebound team will be spending Season 2 in new spaces with new people, painting rich portraits of the participants themselves. Moving beyond the technical oddities and isolation of the COVID age, this season’s younger and older voices harmonize and augment each other in the keys of upheaval, ambition, survival, and love. In capturing sweet, funny, heartbreaking, and even awkward moments of conversation between young and old, Homebound Season 2 is more than a refreshing listen - it’s a call to celebrate the humanity in all of us.

New episodes of Homebound will be available every other Wednesday starting August 18 and can be streamed from Apple Podcasts, Spotify, Google Podcasts, Amazon Music, and Stitcher among other streaming services. More information can be found on the Limelight
